

A CONQUERABLE WORLD

<http://files.abovetopsecret.com/files/img/>

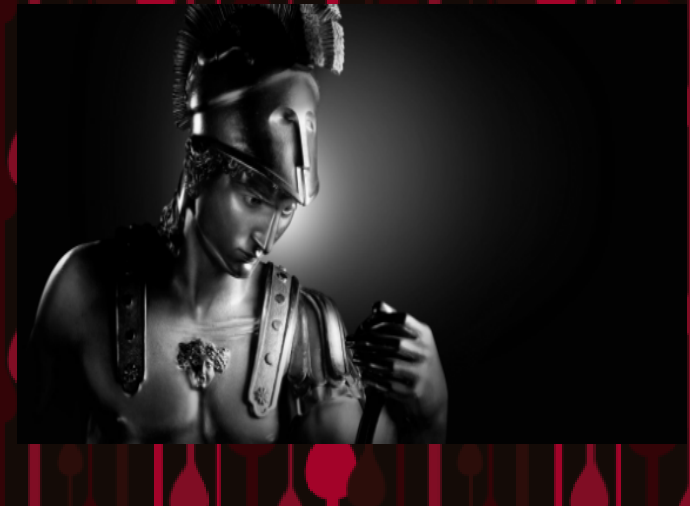

<http://cdn.ancientl.com/wp-content/>

JULIUS CAESAR

Julius Caesar crossed the western sea, in an unprecedented attempt to attack Britain, he failed. Caesar also was elected life-long dictator of Rome. Even though he was apart of a leadership spot in Rome, he was involved in many civil wars there. Gaius Julius Caesar faced the Gaul's (Modern day France) thirty times in battle, and conquered four-hundred of their tribes. At the end of every campaign, Caesar was impossible to terrify and was very triumphant.

- Both Julius Caesar and Alexander the Great had armies who enthusiastically devoted to the both of them.
- Caesar and Alexander both traced themselves back to Zeus, claiming how powerful they are.
- Caesar and Alexander both liked to pardon their captives, showing slight generosity.
- The two war mongrels both died while planning fresh campaigns, leaving behind unfinished business
- Neither of them cared to notice the omens which referred to them, nor showed any displeasure with the seers who prophesied their gruesome deaths, showing slight stubbornness

ALEXANDER THE GREAT

Alexander the Great was never defeated and always brought his campaigns to an end. He conquered many foreign territory in most of Europe, ruling most of the continent. Alexander overran virtually the whole of Asia, ruling all of it as well. After conquering most of Europe and Asia, he ventured on an un-sailed sea in India. Unlike Julius Caesar's army, Alexander's was never humiliated, nor beaten.