

Ideation Final Project Proposal

The thing that inspires my photos the most I think is prior photographic experiences and other artists. I feel like making good black and white photos is a really difficult because you have to use other elements besides color to portray emotions, feelings, etc. you have to think deeper when taking black and white photos. Black and white photos are the most interesting to me and the artists behind them are very inspiring. In the past I've tried doing black and white photos and although they aren't the best, they're the ones I seem to enjoy the most.

For my photo series I am going to do it all about repetition and in black and white. I was having trouble deciding what to make my photo series about. I had so many ideas going through my mind but none of them seemed good enough or interesting enough. I was looking around me for inspiration when I noticed all the repetition around me. I never noticed how much repetition surrounded us every day. That's when I decided that I would do my photo series on the repetition found in our daily lives. I want to show the repetition that goes unnoticed. I feel that doing it all in black and white will help it stand out more. The pictures are obviously going to be taken in color first and then using Photoshop I am going to turn them into black and white. I will also probably use adobe Photoshop to enhance the contrast, manipulate the brightness, fix the exposure, crop it and play with the shadows. I have decided that the title of my final product is going to be Daily Repetition.
